IV.B.5

Future of Work in a COVID-19 World

[Discussion]
THE FUTURE OF WORK IN A COVID-19 WORLD

Phase 1

- Began as Automation|Artificial Intelligence|Future of Work in Silicon Valley project
  - Research and solutions development for changing workplace opportunities and challenges based on projected impacts of automation and artificial Intelligence over the next five years
  - Improve attainment of economic self-sufficiency
  - Focus on solutions for new entrants to the labor force — adult and youth — especially with limited educational attainment, skills, income, representation in middle- and high-skills careers, etc., and for dislocated workers with barriers such as age and skills
- Literature review, quantitative analysis, stakeholder interviews, advisory panel
- Interrupted by COVID-19 crisis
- Pivot to account for economic impact of COVID-19 public health measures
  - Literature review, revised quantitative analysis, follow-up interviews
  - Revised projection of likely impacts on labor market, retaining constituency focus
  - Directional (strategic?) recommendations

Phase 2

- Identify strategy, policy and operational/service changes to support underrepresented residents’ attainment of upward mobility and economic self-sufficiency in the post-crisis COVID-19 economy and give businesses the workforce development support they need to achieve and sustain success.
- Informed by quantitative and qualitative research with a strong focus on
  - the economy in and surrounding Santa Clara County, including likely short-term and long-term recovery scenarios
  - communities that are and historically have been underrepresented in middle- and upper-income employment and have/have had less/minimal access to the means to attain upward mobility and economic self-sufficiency
  - labor market entrants—adults and youths—with limited educational attainment, skills, income, and other barriers to economic mobility
  - dislocated workers with barriers to self-sufficiency re-employment, e.g., limited experience, insufficient or out-of-date skills, lack of in-demand skills, age
  - self-employed workers, including gig workers and owners of “mom and pop” neighborhood businesses and microbusinesses
  - communities especially hard-hit by COVID-19, such as East San Jose and Gilroy
- Project components include
  - Real-time environmental scan of the impact of COVID-19
  - Analysis of existing policies, partnerships, programs, services
  - Quantitative research and analysis
  - Input from employer engagement, neighborhood small/micro-business engagement and community engagement
  - Ongoing feedback loops with staff and stakeholders
  - Presentation of draft findings and analysis
  - Development of recommendations with staff and stakeholders
  - Presentation of findings, analysis and draft recommendations to Board
  - Finalized findings, analysis and recommendations in a final report
